Man Suffering from Alzheimer's Loses Fortune to Convicted Murder

Online dating has become one of the most popular ways for people to find a mate, but who says all participants are looking for love?

In November of 2005, Norman Butler had thought he found the woman he was going to spend the rest of his life with. With his children grown, he decided to start dating again after the death of his late wife.

Shea Saenger appeared to be the perfect match for the lonely widower, his children liked her and they seemed to get along great. As their love blossomed, Butler was diagnosed with Alzheimer's. Saenger stayed by his side through the painful ordeal and his children were grateful for her dedication.

In 2009, a series of red flags surfaced. Norman Butler had saved all of his life and invested well, with a nearly $2 million fortune put away his children became concerned when his checks started bouncing. They decided to do a background search of Ms. Saenger, who had full access to their father's savings.

Apparently, their father's companion was a convicted murder and a thief. She had drained his account within their 4 year relationship.

Online Dating: Should You Pre-Screen Your Love Interest?

There are hundreds of stories similar to the one above. Unfortunately there is very little chance of recovering what is lost once these Cyber- Black- Widows have done their deed.

Online dating profiles generally do not have an entry field for Criminal History, to protect yourself and your family it could be extremely beneficial to find out who you are dealing with before they have a chance to change your life for the worst. If your mate has nothing to hide, why not double check?

According to an article written by Alex Silverman of Kiro Radio, finding the appropriate background check provider is very important. Online providers seem quick and easy; however, they do not thoroughly represent the individual in question. Often times, they neglect to provide civil court cases. These type court files provide information regarding domestic violence, restraining orders, etc. Not only can they be insufficient, but they tend to be more expensive.

Preserve your safety and the safety of your family, do your research!
